The Man and His Work.

(Jno. L. Shroy in Lippincott's.)

I haven't much faith in the man who complains

Of the work he has chosen to do. He's lazy, or else he's deficient in brains.

And—maybe—a hypocrite, too. He's likely to cheat and he's likely to rob;

Away with the man who finds fault with his job.

But give me the man with the sun in his face,

And the shadows all dancing behind;

Who can meet his reverses with calmness and grace,

And never forgets to be kind;

For whether he's wielding a scepter or swab,

I have faith in the man who's in love with his job.

All Needed is a Little Help.

President Richardson, of the Commercial Club, states that the Club is going to take up the matter of getting de-natured alcohol made in Roswell and the Pecos Valley, in order to secure cheap fuel for gasoline engines and, incidentally, automobiles. If a few local people will show enough interest in the proposition to put a little money into the experiment, enough outside capital can be secured to get a manufacturing plant here. If Roswell were to put in a plant of this character and the people were shown how easily this product is made from waste vegetable matter, it would not be long before every farmer would have a little plant of his own and would be running his gasoline engines for nothing, practically. In Germany this is the case, and none of the waste fruit and vegetables are lost. De-natured alcohol must be made under government revenue officers' inspection, to insure against making the drinkable kind, and the Commercial Club is also looking into the legal side of the question.
